Tidying up - Physically and Virtually

Physical Cleaning

We work hard to minimise the environmental impact of our physical actions. This includes tidying up the site at the end.

We are all crew. The packing up should not be left to those who have worked the hardest during the day. Encourage others to help out so you can all get away sooner and celebrate.

Virtual Cleaning

People should be fired up by the action. Make sure you make the most of the momentum you have created by talking about what's next or redirect them to permanent administered chats.

Once you have sent out final messages, collected debrief feedback and shared images from your action, it is advisable to remove everyone from chat group and delete the chat.

Abandoned chat groups pose a risk both from spammers harvesting contact details and also from the authorities if they gain access to a rebel's phone they are able to start to build maps of connections to other rebels.
