What do the Production teams do?

Production & World Build focuses on logistical and hands-on work and takes care of the practical and technical sides of rebellion. In short: we amplify actions!

We make sure to provide the equipment needed to intensify any action. This involves sourcing, delivering and operating kit and training crews to work both behind the scenes and on the ground.

We consist of six main teams, Site Design and Build, Sound and Power, Logistics, Sustenance, Sanitation and Waste and Accommodation.

See the next pages for more detailed information on each group, checklists for running your own Action, Protest or Rebellion, and information on how to connect with or get involved in these teams.

Sound & Power

What is it?

Providing mobile PAs, sound systems, pop-up stages and solar-power set-ups; essentially bringing the vibes to any action! The Sound and Power team have kit stored in the central warehouse to provide amplification of any sort to your action.

What skills or training do I need?

You don't need any specific skills or knowledge to join the team as all training can be given. Sound and Power run training courses to equip people with the knowledge and skills needed. In particular training can be given for people interested in running the cycle rickshaws which amplify sound at many London marches.

Logistics

Logistics: Looking after the safe handling, transport and storage of XR's amazing action kit and equipment; literally bringing all the toys needed for any actions.

Typically required when you or any team involved in the action has kit or assets to move around. Logistics coordinates the flow of kit to and from site, so this involves knowing what is coming, where it's coming from, how it's getting to site, where it needs to be and when, when it needs taking away and where it's going to.

A team of volunteers is needed to make this happen and organising and managing these teams is a big part of logistics too. Logistics works with lorry, van, or car drivers, rickshaw or cargo bike riders, volunteers on foot loading and unloading, and shifting kit around by hand or with trolleys.

Check List for Logistics for a specific Action:

- Have, and record a clear list of what is being supplied, where it's coming from, how it's arriving and where it needs to be.
- Make sure everything is clearly labelled.
- Make sure you know where things need to be returned to - quick and efficient site clearing is as important as the set up.
- Keep encouraging volunteers before, during, and after the event. You'll likely need a lot of people to help move kit around and everyone works better when they feel needed and valued.
- Make sure you have enough space in your transport, whether this is a truck, van or cargo bike - underestimating space is worse than having some spare room for the inevitable extras that will arrive.
- Know when to say no. If you don't have the capacity to move or deliver kit whether this is due to lack of funds, resources or volunteers, communicate this to your team, or the team making requests of you, as soon as you can.

Site Design & Build

What do we do?

We are responsible for the design and build of sites, spaces, occupations and the different elements within those spaces, i.e. Outreach Hubs, Stages, Creative Structures etc.

This work is typically undertaken by this team for larger actions or where significant public outreach is planned. However all actions should consider elements of design in their planning.

What is it?

Every Action, Protest or Rebellion takes place on a site which has been chosen according to various criteria. If the Action is aimed at a specific individual / company / business this more than likely determines the site, but if your Action focus is broader the site will be chosen according to criteria identified by your Action Planners.

The Site Design and Build team will work with these criteria to design the various elements of the site to maximum effect, and then with a team of volunteers execute the build and break of the site. Site Design and Build is particularly important for larger outward facing rebellions or protests.

If I want to do Site Design and Build for a specific Action what skills or training do I need?

No specific training is needed but it's helpful to be able to imagine spaces and be able to relate this to the experience you might have in a given space.

Each Action you are involved with will give you more experience of what works best in a given situation. Site Design and Build work closely with the creative team particularly with regard to flags, banners and site decoration.

Check List for Site Design and Build for a specific Action

- Who is your action aimed at and how should it look to them?
 - If a major reason for your action is to get press / social media, how does it look to the camera?
 - How does it look to a passerby: is there an element of outreach involved, are you trying to draw people in, or are you addressing a large crowd?
 - Is it a regenerative action for rebels, how will it look and feel to them?
 - Are you expecting crowds, which direction will they come from?
 - Do you need to be visible from a distance?

- Each of the elements involved needs to be positioned correctly on the site in order to fulfill its purpose. Think about each element in terms of:
 - its purpose
 - who is it aimed at?
 - What is its relationship to neighboring elements and the site as a whole? This applies to everything, whether it's a main stage, an outreach gazebo, a welfare tent, toilets, a food or water station, a banner or flag, a sound system, an element belonging to a partner organisation, or a crew logistics base.
- Size and space
 - How big is your site, how will people move around it?
 - Do they need physical signs, digital maps, or stewards with info?
 - Is there enough space for a flow of people without bottlenecks?
 - Is there too much space so your crowd will appear very small?
 - What's the access like for wheelchair users or disabled people?
 - Article on appropriate crowd densities for various situations
- Have you thought about the weather?
 - Will it impact your action?
 - Can you alter the site design to mitigate against too much wind / rain / sun?

Sustenance

Sustenance: Making sure there's systems, crew and equipment in place to feed hungry rebels so they can go on rebelling!

If I want to do Sustenance for a specific Action what skills or training do I need?

Some experience in food preparation and a basic knowledge of food hygiene would be ideal but is not essential. If someone in your team has these skills there is plenty of room for others to volunteer alongside.

Check List for providing Sustenance for a specific action...

- How many people are you aiming to cater for? Do you have the capacity for this (in terms of food, distribution, volunteers, cooking space etc)?
- Think about what is most suitable for your action, what will the weather be like? What time of day is it? How close are local amenities? How integral is food to the action? If sharing food and eating together is an integral part of bringing groups together make sure there is the time and space and facilities for this. Or are you providing high energy snacks on the go? Easy to eat food for people in a sit in / occupation / lock-on?
- Where can you prep / cook / eat? How much time will it take and how many volunteers do you need? Do you have the facilities necessary?
- If your kitchen / prep area is off site how will you transport the food? Where are your ingredients coming from? Do you have food donations or need budget, and time and people to shop?

Providing Sustenance without a kitchen or dedicated team

If it is possible or appropriate to have a full sustenance team, ask people to bring extra food or drink to share with others. Things like - vegan pasties, biscuits, dried apricots, energy balls, crisps, nuts and roasted seeds are great nutritious options. You should aim to serve plant based food, with minimal allergy restrictions. Please note your ingredients so if you befriend anyone with allergies, they can check!

Toilets, Sanitation and Waste

What is it?

Shits and giggles! Seriously, Sanitation and Waste may not have the most glamorous name but it's a vital part of any Rebellion and often has a great team of people who have as much of a laugh as anyone else, and are always hugely appreciated by everyone.

The Sanitation and Waste team will ensure that everyone has access to a toilet, to safe drinking water, and that the site is left in as pristine a condition as it was found - or often better.

If I want to do Sanitation and Waste for a specific Action what skills or training do I need?

No specific skills or training are needed.

Check List for Sanitation and Waste for a specific Action:

- Where are the nearest public toilets to your action? If there are no public toilets near by is there a cafe or pub that would be happy for people to use the toilet? Often agreements can be made with local businesses which benefit all parties and are a great opportunity for outreach.
- Check any toilets that you have identified as useable are also accessible. -If there are no toilets available you may need to provide your own, either using a portable system or hiring toilets, this will depend on who you are catering for.
- If you are hiring toilets you need to think about how many people will need to use them and how long they will be available for. Hire companies can often help you figure out how many units you may need.
- Will people have access to clean drinking water? Are there facilities on or near the site? Local cafe's or pubs that can refill bottles? Drinking fountains? When tapping into water sources that have not been agreed to extreme care must be taken to ensure it is clean safe drinking water.
- Do any of your groups on site require access to water? eg. Sustenance team? Art blockers?
- How much waste will you be generating? It's always best to find ways to produce less waste before trying to organise dealing with waste.
- How will you collect waste in a hygienic way? XR has a large number of pink litter pickers made for the big one which are stored in the warehouse in London and can be leant out for any action.

- Make sure all waste is sorted for responsible disposal. How will you remove waste from site? Can you use waste disposal systems already in place for the location you are at?
- XR are known for leaving sites cleaner than they have found them - let's keep this up!

Accommodation

Working on providing indoor accommodation for groups or individuals and setting up and running protest camps.

The Accommodation Team work hard to help everyone find a place to stay for major events (usually rebellions in London).

We aim to provide a safe space for anyone in need; people who otherwise would not be able to come to London and places where rebels can rest and regenerate after a long day's protest.

The number of camps and indoor accommodation organised depends on the number of rebels registering. Managing accommodation needs extensive planning, as it will involve infrastructure, essentials, and preparing to be camping in more than one park. Please see volunteering roles below.

Camping

Campsite specific locations are not normally released until just before we open them. This is to avoid unwanted attention from the public. We aim to cooperate with local communities as far as possible - if you live in London and there is a community area possibly suitable for camping near you, please let us know.

Camping in London at Rebellions

Join the London Campers Community Telegram Group for updates and to communicate with other potential campers.

Managing the camp(s) will be a daunting task. We need campers to volunteer at least a few hours help - we are all crew! Please join the London Campers Volunteer Chat, where you can connect to other volunteers.

Camping in public spaces in London is illegal, however XRUK liaises with local authorities and the Met Police to ensure camps are safe. Locations will only be released once the local authorities have been contacted approximately 7 days before, at which point they are more likely to be supportive.

Contact the Accommodation Team by email if you have any questions:

Indoor Accommodation

We aim to secure as many indoor spaces as possible, such as church halls, mosques, community centres, warehouses and sports halls.

- Could you offer space in your home or camping in your garden?
- Do you know any spaces in London that might be suitable?

commuUnityHome

In addition, there is comUnityHome accommodation.

CommUnityHome is an online marketplace for shelter that connects hosts with campaigners needing a bed. By... Organising and Unifying people around a compassionate circular economic structure. If you need accommodation, register as a guest and then make a booking.
