Guiding Principles

We will be representative of the population at large: we cannot claim the mantle of ‘the people’, or drive true cultural tipping points, without the widest possible representation.

In working with other groups, we will be open to different opinions on how to achieve our vision: we will not be prescriptive, but instead work to foster regenerative, collective processes to determine how our vision will be achieved.

We will form true partnerships: the community of civil resistance will not be led by Extinction Rebellion UK; instead XR UK will, where necessary, play a facilitation role, where key decisions can be taken jointly.

Local XR UK groups will be empowered to decide themselves how best to meet the strategic objectives according to their circumstances.
